We invite four experts who share their experiences in working in or researching museums that support people around serious illness, caregiving, death and dying.

Lieven De Visch is public mediation coordinator of the museums in Bruges, Belgium. He facilitates public engagement with a history of care in St John's Hospital Museum.

Carol Tishelman is professor at Karolinska Institute in Sweden and has researched how museums can facilitate discussions about death and dying.

Emel Yorganci and Annabel Farnood are researchers at King's College in London and facilitated conversations about young people's perceptions about dementia in museums.
